ABOUT THE CONFERENCE

The drastic changes and unbalanced development have been the major factors of environmental changes and consequently, the shifts in temperature and weather patterns have been adversely affected. The human driven activities such as burning of fossil fuels (like coal, oil, gas), utilization of natural resources in unbalanced manner etc. are adversely affecting the living and non-living components of the environment. The emission of greenhouse gases, landfills of garbage, uncontrolled use of non-degradable plastics etc. have adversely affected the microbial flora of the environment and it directly/indirectly affects the human health. Climate change derived new diseases cause drastic changes in the diversity of microbes. Besides this, the fauna and flora have been affected by the adverse impacts of environment due to which the productivity of these components in terms of yield, active principles and compositions have been changed drastically.
