Spoken English is an important part of Communication. For most non-native speakers it is a challenge to use the accurate pronunciation of words to convey their intended message. Inability to pronounce words properly reduces the level of confidence in students. Considering this need, the guest lecture focussed on pronunciation rules and addressed the common errors students make even in simple words they use everyday. Besides, the students were taught how and where to apply stress on words. Tonal variation which helps convey the intended message correctly was also deliberated upon.

By the end of the lecture, the learners could read and speak certain words correctly and they realized the importance of having variation in the tone. The guest lecture motivated students to learn and do more regular exercise in pronunciation of words.
